

Abstract

Issay An injector for a fuel injection system for internal combustion engines is proposed, whose system pressure supply is integrated with the injector. This results in a simple design with at the same time a low requirement for driving capacity on the part of the high-pressure pump for supplying system pressure.

(Fig. 1)